“3 Holy Risks in Christ’s Charity for the Human Race” Charity is the very substance of the life of the Blessed Trinity: self-giving love. It is looking out for the good of the other, while making a gift of our self to and for the other. We are called to share in this gift of godly love. True charity always looks for the good in the other and is willing to take risks to help the other. We are commemorating tonight three gifts of Jesus’ charity to the human race: the Holy Eucharist, the sacramental Priesthood, and the gift of service in relation to God and our fellow human beings.

1. Jesus at the Last Supper, the first Mass, gave us the gift of His Body and Blood, Soul and Divinity in the Holy Eucharist. This is the most personal gift of the heart of Christ, according to the saints, in which He chose the most profound way to remain with His followers until He returns at the end of time: see the Gospel of John chapter 6. What a gift it is! To receive the Lord of Life in Holy Communion is something we can NEVER take for granted or receive lightly. This is why both St. Paul (see 1 Corth chap 11: 27-32) and the Church says we must always examine ourselves prior to receiving the Holy Eucharist to make sure we are not receiving the Lord unworthily, i.e., in the state of serious sin. The saints say again Jesus knew the risk of giving Himself to us literally in the Holy Eucharist, that we humans could indeed receive Him haphazardly in a spirit of indifference, or without faith, or even in the state of alienation from Him, i.e. mortal sin; but He was willing to take the risk out of charity, knowing the potential that some souls would receive Him with great love and be transformed in holiness – which all of us are capable of doing with the help of His grace. Thank you Jesus for the gift of the Holy Eucharist which unites us with you beyond our imagining - when we receive you with Faith and reverence and with a firm determination to turn away from all sin, big and small. Help us to grow in our love for you in the Holy Eucharist. May we show our love in adoration.
2. Jesus on the night of the Last Supper also gave His Church the gift of the ordained priesthood. Again He was taking a great risk, knowing that some of the men He called to be priests could betray Him, e.g. Judas, or lose heart, or never love Him with the total gift of their lives, or be a bad example to the faithful. But He also saw again in charity, out of the goodness of His heart, that His priests could be the instruments to bring many souls to Him and be icons of His generous love and goodness. That they could bring His Body and Blood to the Faithful in the Eucharist, forgive even the most grievous of sins in Confession, give new Life to souls in Baptism, anoint those who are sick and dying, witness the love of man and woman in the permanent covenant of marriage, preach His message of saving love and truth to a world full of sadness and despair, and help in so many other manifold ways to bring people to His heart. Because of charity, He was willing to take the risk of entrusting the leadership of His Church to frail men who would act in His name. Thank you Jesus for the gift of the ordained priesthood, and please inspire many other men, especially in our Diocese, to say Yes to your loving Heart and give their lives to You as priests of your New Covenant. May all of us pray daily for the priests and future priests of the Church.

3. Finally Jesus gives us the example of charity in action when he washes the feet of the Apostles, which is symbolic for all the acts of self-giving love we are called to do as His disciples. Again the Lord when He created us human beings took the risk of giving us freedom, which can be used either for self-giving love or for selfishness. The Lord tonight sets the example for us of how we are to both think of others and give to others of our time, our talent and our treasure. The season of Lent hopefully brought this home in our lives in a deeper way: all prayer, fasting and almsgiving are to lead to a deeper life of charity in union with Christ. This should be seen both in deeper union with, the source of charity, the Blessed Trinity and in loving our neighbor better. The Lord knows this is not easy for us human beings to do this, but through His example and by the grace He won for us in His Passion, Death and Resurrection we now have the opportunity to follow in His way of total self-giving love. Thank you Jesus for Your example of loving service. The Lord Jesus took 3 big risks the night of the Last Supper: giving us the Holy Eucharist, the ordained priesthood, and the example of self-giving service, in the hope that we would respond in kind. What is our response?
